Sandy Point Estates is a 12.9-hectare beachfront property on the tip of Puntarenitas, on Costa Rica's stunning Osa Peninsula. It's bounded by world-class beaches on two sides and by the Preciosa-Platanares Wildlife Refuge on a third, yet it's just one kilometer as the crow flies from all the conveniences of the region's biggest city, Puerto Jiménez.

Sandy Point is zoned under MINAE and has an active use permit that allows for ecotourism commercial development. Eight lots are for sale, individually or as a whole.

The Golfo Dulce is the 10th-deepest gulf in the world and is named “Sweet Gulf” because it’s fed by fresh water from nine rivers that decrease its salinity by several parts per thousand.

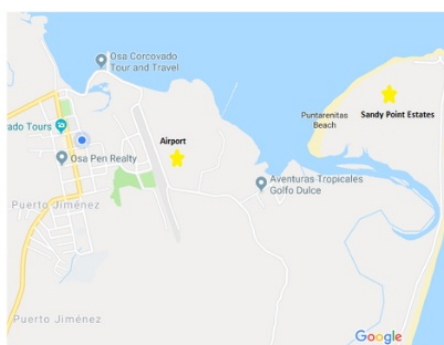

The Osa is sometimes called Costa Rica’s Wild West, and also its final frontier. It’s home to an incredible 2.5% of the world’s biodiversity, meaning that for every 200 plant and animal species on earth, five of them live in the Osa.

The Platanares River and the Preciosa-Platanares Wildlife Refuge constitute a wilderness highway that extends from Sandy Point Estates in unbroken forest to the spine of the Osa Peninsula. It's a passageway for monkeys, anteaters, coatis and many other animals that come and go from the highlands to feed on the fruit trees closer to the sea.

Home to Corcovado National Park, the Osa is Costa Rica's premier ecotourism destination. Sandy Point Estate's zoning and recently MINAE-issued use permit makes it an ideal fit for a world-class ecotourism facility.

Preciosa-Platanares Wildlife Refuge

Sandy Point Estates has eight individual lots, all with identical use permits and paperwork. Lots can be purchased individually, or a single buyer can acquire the entire property and turn it into a go-to destination in one of the world's most iconic habitats.
